Angel Mythology, Lucifer/Metatron, "Before The Fall" (This is not Angel The Series; this is actual angels mythology.)

Took me ages to figure this out, it's PG for kissing and was interesting in that I had to try a Lucifer who wasn't strictly from SPN or A.S. and the Metatron wasn't strictly the A.S. one or the SMT one, so. Yeah.

The Metatron is glorious and golden before him, bright in a different way from Lucifer's fire, and Lucifer cannot help but bow to this most glorious of angels, he who is the voice of God.

"I seek wisdom," Lucifer says to this King of angels, and he feels fingers on his face, lifting his chin.

He understands why the Metatron does not speak, as the mouthpiece of God has few words of its own, and so Lucifer meets the Metatron's opened mouth with his own, sharing breath and stopping words and presses flesh to flesh.

The Metatron holds his wrists now, continuing the kiss, and stares into his eyes, and Lucifer knows not what he came here for, but shares an experience he will keep and treasure.

When he is released from the hold and the kiss, Lucifer falls back, breathless and refreshed and if he aches, he aches with the pain of seeing glory firsthand, a glory that is not his own.
